This journal has had an independent career of ten years. Every princi-pal point it has sought to gain through independent action it has always carried. But it does not accept that definition of independence which, to please organs that gather with their little straws about official bungholes, would make it in effect a mere assistant of the democratic party.

The banks of East India, where a silver standard is in yogue, have been making a bad showing lately, owing to their losses caused by silver fluctuations. Trade has suffered in the same way, and for the same reason. Nothing that has occurred during the last fifty years accolerated our own foreign trade like the re-sumption of specie payments, on a gold basis, by our government. Thousmoying and wasteful fluctuations of exchange resulting from our variable paper currency were greatly reduced and our trade was correspondingly benefited. and our tinde was correspondingly benefited.
A silver standard would go far toward re-establishing the old condition of things, and would make our commuter and our exchanges far more subservient to foreign money markets than they now are. Financial and commercial independence must be based on the most solid and immovable groundwork actainable. The British understand this and hence the tenacity with which they cling to their single gold standard.
